CIVIL SOCIETY STATEMENT AHEAD OF THE 2026 AFRICA FORWARD SUMMIT

We, African, French, and international communities and civil society organizations committed to fighting health inequalities, call on African and French leaders to place people, equity, and country-led priorities at the heart of health cooperation.

We regret that civil society has had limited opportunities to meaningfully participate in the Africa Forward Summit, despite its essential role in delivering prevention, care, and shaping public health policies and ensuring accountability. Today, we reclaim our seat at the table and present to you our vision and recommendations for a stronger, more resilient future.

- Strengthening health systems to leave no one behind

We recommend that you consider health as the key driver of our collective security and shared prosperity. As His Excellency President John Mahama said at the One Health Summit in April in Lyon: “A healthy and thriving Africa will be a positive force for global progress, not a threat to anyone.” Now is the time to invest in the women and men who deliver care and to ensure that innovation protects everyone, not just the privileged few, against diseases and the impact of poverty, conflict and climate change.

- Guaranteeing an equitable health architecture to maintain true sustainable partnerships

We recommend that you reshape the global health architecture into one that is fair, inclusive and built on trust. National priorities should inform health compacts, established through a whole-of-country approach, including governments, civil society, communities and the private sector committed to the common good. In the field of research, supporting regional manufacturing means empowering countries to stand on their own strength, while remaining deeply connected to its partners.

- Optimising financing to ensure global health security

We recommend that you invest in health in line with its strategic potential. We ask that the global community does not give up on the goals to end epidemics and increase funding needed as a health threat in Africa is a health threat for everyone everywhere. Health sovereignty and global solidarity are not opposites; they are two expressions of the same commitment to a healthier, safer world. External financing should catalyse sovereignty via targeted initiatives, not perpetuate dependence, and domestic resources for health should complement international solidarity thanks to progressive tax systems.

At the end of the day, the true measure of success is simple: are people cared for, protected, and able to live with dignity? Health is not a technical issue alone: it is a common public good that must be reclaimed as such. It is a political choice that shapes whether people survive, thrive, and participate fully in society.

At a time of shrinking aid, rising health needs, and growing inequalities, equitable partnerships backed by predictable growing resources are what will make global health security sustainable. You have the chance and the responsibility to create a system where health threats are tackled collectively and effectively so that people can survive and thrive: take it, and accept our support in this journey.
